UL Hospital Group Affiliated Academic Geriatric Medicine Rotation

The UL Hospital Group comprised of six clinical sites, St. John's Hospital, University Hospital Limerick, University Maternity Hospital, Croom Orthopaedic Hospital, Ennis Hospital, Nenagh Hospital, provides an exciting academic training opportunity for doctors at registrar level to train for 1-2 years in Geriatric Medicine.

This training programme is affiliated with University of Limerick and invites trainees to work with key mentors at Consultant and Management level with clinical expertise encompassing all aspects of geriatric and general medicine. Special interest areas include acute stroke treatment, complex bone disease, syncope and falls, rehabilitation, movement and cognitive disorders and management of complex multi-morbidity, frailty and therapeutics.

This programme offers opportunities to become involved in teaching at undergraduate and post-graduate level, participate in membership examination training and research. There is a keen research ethos within the Department, the opportunity to become involved in the development of Clinical Information Systems and develop NCHD leadership roles. Each registrar rotation within the Department of Ageing and Therapeutics will be developed to facilitate the interests and training requirements of a doctor.
